Troopers Set for Heavy Thanksgiving Traffic

Whether your holiday plans take you across town or across the country, getting there safely is a top priority, particularly during Thanksgiving, which ranks nationwide as the busiest travel period of the year.

With nine out of 10 holiday travelers choosing to travel by motor vehicle, Alabama can count on heavy traffic throughout the Thanksgiving holiday.

To help ensure holiday safety, state

the agency's new director.

"Col. Coppage has rendered valuable service to the people of Alabama and I wish him all the best as he pursues other opportunities," Riley said. "He's a dedicated law enforcement officer who has worked to make Alabama a safer place. Our state is fortunate that Special Agent Chris Murphy is stepping forward to serve us as our new Public Safety director. His leadership ability combined with the wealth of experience and knowledge he's gained will make him an outstanding addition to our Cabinet."

As special agent in charge of the Birmingham District Office since 2002, Murphy has overseen four Secret Service offices in Alabama and three offices in Mississippi. Prior to his service in the Birmingham District Office, Murphy was a manager in the Secret Service's field office in Houston, where he ran a financial crimes task force. From 1996-1998, Murphy managed the Secret Service office in Montgomery, where he worked the gamut of criminal investigations and protective responsibilities.

Murphy has provided protection for presidents and vice presidents since Ronald Reagan and has worked protective details for former Presidents Ford and Carter, presidential candidates, and a host of foreign heads-of-state visiting this country. He began his career in law enforcement as a patrolman, corporal and detective with the Auburn Police Department in 1978.

"It is an honor to be joining the Riley administration and to be serving the people of Alabama in one of the most important departments in our state," Murphy said.

Murphy earned his undergraduate degree in criminal justice at Auburn University in 1981, and his master's degree in the administration of criminal justice at Troy University in 1997.

Coppage, whose term as Public Safety director ends Nov. 30, is a law enforcement veteran. After serving four years as a military policeman and criminal investigator in the U.S. Army, he joined the Birmingham Police Department in 1974 as a patrol officer. He worked his way up through the ranks to become Birmingham's chief of police in 1998. Coppage remained in that position until Riley tapped him to join the governor's Cabinet in February 2003.

"It has been a great honor to serve in the Riley administration and with the outstanding men and women who make up the Alabama Department of Public Safety," Coppage said.

Murphy begins serving as Public Safety director Dec. 1.

troopers caution motorists to drive courteously, patiently and defensively; use seatbelts and child restraints on all trips; and refrain from drinking and driving.

Highway Patrol Division Chief Maj. Patrick Manning said trooper enforcement will be strengthened during the Thanksgiving holiday. In addition to routine and targeted patrol activity, troopers will conduct driver license checkpoints, line patrols and saturation patrols in selected areas.

Through grant funding made available by the Alabama Department of Economic and Community Affairs and the Department of Transportation, HP plans to put every available trooper on the road during the Thanksgiving holiday period, according to Manning.

Troopers will underscore violations involving impaired driving, speeding, following too closely and both seatbelt and child restraint violations.

"The colonels and I greatly appreciate the dedication and hard work of all troopers from every division who will be working this holiday season to keep our roadways safe," said Manning.

DPS estimates that 19 people may die in traffic crashes in Alabama during the 102-hour travel period, which begins at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 23, and ends at midnight Sunday, Nov. 27. Last year 19 people died as a result of traffic crashes during the Thanksgiving period. Ten of the victims were not using seatbelts, and alcohol was a factor in at least three of the fatal crashes.

Col. W.M. Coppage, Director

It is with mixed emotions that I must confirm the rumor which I am sure many of you have heard during the past few weeks. My last day as director will be Nov. 30.

On the one hand, it has been a difficult decision, as I have thoroughly enjoyed my association with all of you here at DPS. On the other hand, family responsibilities make this decision an easy one.

It has been a distinct pleasure and a very high honor to have served with you as director. Despite the times when it seemed as if we were faced with insurmountable obstacles, together we were able to turn them into stepping stones that enabled us to move toward better service for the citizens of this state.

While we were unable to accomplish all of the goals which I had set, I feel that we have laid a solid foundation upon which to build for the future.

Thank you for your devotion to this department and to the citizens of the state of Alabama.

I will always cherish the memories of my time with DPS and the many friends that Judy and I have made. Until we meet again, I pray that the Lord will bless you and keep you and hold you in the hollow of His hand.

With deepest regards.

Lt. Col. Glenda Deese, Assistant Director

The BLUE LIGHT editor, Angier Johnson, of Public Information/Education, expressed to me that our next issue would be during the month of November. Focusing on Thanksgiving, she wanted to know what I was thankful for.

Well, as I thought of the many wonderful things, such as family, life etc., I knew that there was much more in my life that allowed me to live the wonderful and peaceful life that I do.

I am thankful for the feet that walked the difficult journeys in my life, which I did not have to make alone. I have walked with many who needed me beside them, or I needed them beside me. I could have been left behind or trampled upon, but I was blessed enough to be carried at times. Thankfully, I carried a few, as well, and never walked over anyone. My family and friends are the best.

I am thankful for the helping hands that lifted me up daily and allowed me to lift others up as well. Pitching in to help others in need, both physically and monetarily, is by far more uplifting in spirit than choosing to push others down. The reward for being good to everyone is far better than being corrupt.

Over the years I have tried to speak words of encouragement to build a person's self-esteem. I choose not to use my words to tear people down or to belittle them in any way. My family and friends surely spoke words of encouragement to me as I journeyed through my life and career. I refused to blow up from frustration and, as a result, exhibited appropriate and productive behavior, which prevented me from saying and doing the wrong things for the right reason.

What Are You Thankful For This Thanksgiving?

We associate Thanksgiving with a hearty feast, parades, festivals, and don't forget the football. During this special holiday, we also pause to give thanks, and The BLUE LIGHT is pleased to share with readers the following notes of gratitude provided by members of the DPS family.

I Am Thankful for

"The men and women who serve in law enforcement, and first responders, especially our military personnel willing to sacrifice all that they do so I can spend a safe and happy Thanksgiving with my family, even when it means they are away from theirs." Galen Wagner, Driver License, Information Services, Montgomery

"God's love, comfort, peace and joy in my life. I am just grateful for my family, friends, even enemies and the opportunity to grow in God's purpose for my life every day. I am also thankful for the trials and tribulations I face daily because these situations bring about spiritual growth to prepare me for whatever God calls me to do!" Regina Manuel, Driver License, Information Services, Montgomery

"My wife and I are thankful for the amazing support received from the DPS family during her battle with cancer." Cpl. Thad Snyder, ABI, EOD Unit, Jacksonville

"All the Lord has done for me! He has made me aware that my freedom is not free! Men and women lay down their lives daily for me to enjoy my freedom. I have good health, a good job (and a place to park), a family to love and receive love. I also have good friends and a church to fellowship with others and worship Him. What more could I want?" Judy Dean, Administrative Division, FARS/Planning and Research Unit, Montgomery

"For my family and a great group of coworkers, especially at the Selma ABI office. I am most thankful for my health, which I remind myself of every day. We are blessed to see the sun rise and set daily, hear the laughter of our children and be able to walk from one place to another. These pleasures are free to us, but we forget how much it would be worth for some to experience what we take for granted. I am thankful this season for what I have and not what I wish I had." Agent Joe Lee, ABI, Area 3, Selma

"To be a child of God, to love everyone because He first loved me. The love of God will make you treat your neighbor right, and I am most grateful." Mary Williams, Highway Patrol, Communications, Montgomery Post

"Good health, a caring family, great friends and a job that I am proud of." Tpr. Eric Dowdell, Administrative, Public Information/Education, Opelika

"Granting my family and me the miracle of sparing my mother. She had a major stroke last year and was in critical condition. The doctors gave us little hope. I prayed for a miracle like I have never prayed before. Well, she survived. She still cannot walk or do for herself, but she has come a long way. I am thankful for the many loving friends that have prayed for her." Kathy Bankston, Driver License, Examining, Fairhope

"Having no regrets about the relationship I had with my 'earthly' father, who was killed in a wreck September 11, 2006. I am also grateful that my heavenly Father has been at my side for so long and still loves me in spite of my background. I am grateful for a loving and patient wife, a beautiful 21-month-old daughter, and for the new addition that we learned about the morning of my father's funeral. There is a silver lining surrounding this dark time in life. God is so good to me!" Cpl. Daniel Dean, Highway Patrol, Alexander City

"Each day that the Lord allows me with my family and my friends. The Lord has blessed all of us in so many ways, yet we tend to take those blessings for granted. I am thankful that I have the choice to grab hold of those blessings with all my heart, knowing there are many more to come." Tpr. Melissa Hubbard, Highway Patrol, Selma

"Considering it is November, and I am still able to wear shorts. You gotta love south Alabama. Also, I am eligible for the sergeant's test, and everyone at home is healthy." Cpl. Lawrence Goff, Driver License, Examining, Mobile

"My husband Dwain, daughter Shar'Keia, granddaughter Sha'Mya, and the singing voice that God has given me. I am thankful for life, health, strength, and the ability to love, rejoice and praise in spite of problems that may arise. I am thankful for each day God spares my life and through Him, be a blessing to others." Rachel Fields, Administrative Division, Assistant Director's Office, Montgomery

DIGITAL PATROLLER, New Partners Report for Duty at Montgomery Post

Tpr. Phillip Taylor prepares for shift with new partner, Digital Patroller.

Highway Patrol troopers at the Montgomery Post have been assigned new partners: the Digital Patroller, a pilot unit for the in-car digital video camera systems. More than 30 camera units currently are in use by road troopers and in the Felony Apprehension Program, with the Dothan Post next in line to receive the new technology.

The camera systems enhance DPS enforcement efforts and update agency enforcement technology. Of particular significance is the Digital Patroller's aid in strengthening prosecution by allowing the introduction of video evidence in court via DVD, jump drive and other media storage devices.

The system also is an important safeguard for troopers, providing protection from frivolous and unsubstantiated complaints and helping ensure adherence to policy and procedure.

"When a complaint is made and the tapes are retrieved, we can witness that our troopers did, in fact, act according to policy and were professional," said Sgt. Jack Clark, Montgomery Post commander. "We usually find that a disgruntled driver angry over receiving a ticket retaliates through a complaint, not realizing that the patrol cars are equipped with the cameras. Cameras have proved to be a saving grace for so many of us – a great thing," said Clark.

At the outset, Clark said, some troopers did not embrace the use of the digital cameras. They expressed concerns about "big brother" peering over their shoulders. Clark said he had to reassure them, however, and now that the Digital Patroller is on the job, troopers have seen how this new partner has covered their backs.

Criminal investigations, felony stops and pursuits are easily captured using the cameras; and troopers report that once the video is reviewed, additional evidence not initially observed is often uncovered. Particularly in DUI cases, troopers report that the Digital Patroller is unsurpassed. They say it provides superior video clarity and audio quality to detect slurred speech and obscure sounds.

Clark said the camera system begins taping when blue lights are activated. It records the date, time, unit number, speed and GPS quadrants, which has proven extremely useful in court proceedings to verify an accurate account of incidents.

The new equipment has cemented its place in day-to-day operations, and "if the camera causes a trooper to be a little bit more professional, then all the better," said Clark.

Taylor retrieves data from Digital Patroller.

DPS Family Remembers

Debra Standridge

The Public Safety family was saddened by the loss of Debra Standridge, Driver License Examining, Birmingham, who died recently following her diagnosis with recurring cancer.

Debra is survived by her husband, retired Capt. Jeff Standridge, and sons Brad and Brandon.

Following Debra's loss, Capt. Standridge said he and his sons are beginning a new journey, but without her guidance and encouragement. He appealed for continued prayer from the DPS family, saying, "The mission of this department exemplifies the life that Debra lived; which was to care for one another and to help other people."

Debra joined Public Safety in 1990, as a driver license examiner I. She was promoted to driver license examiner II in August 2001, a position she occupied at the time of her death.

DPS remembers Debra Standridge as an exemplary public servant and as a valued friend. We mourn her loss and extend deepest sympathies to the Standridge family.

Lt. Colonel,

Am I perfect? Not even close. However, I care very deeply for the employees here, and that is why I choose not to waste time on things that are counter-productive to the mission of DPS. I heard someone say, "Gratitude is the attitude that sets the altitude for lifelong living."

I hope that each of you knows how grateful I am for all of your efforts and contributions that you provide to help build and influence DPS.

Thanks for helping me to fly high and yield the fruits of the spirit, such as love, joy, peace, kindness and goodness, to name a few. I wish each of you the same and a very happy and safe holiday.

DPS Personnel Trained on New Cameras

Photography is an indispensable law enforcement tool, and some 45 Alabama state troopers recently had an opportunity to brush up on their photographic skills, thanks to DPS's Photographic Services Unit.

The unit assembled new photo kits for the troopers and provided training for the ABI, Administrative and Highway Patrol personnel designated to receive the new equipment. Photographic Services was able to purchase the cameras with revenue generated by the unit's sale of photographs, according to Tommy Giles, photographic technician.

A Canon representative helped train the troopers to use the cameras and capture quality images in processing crime scenes, documenting crash sites, conducting investigations, and chronicling the work of Public Safety.

Training sessions began at Selma's Alabama Criminal Justice Training Center for Highway Patrol and Administrative personnel and wrapped up in Montgomery at the RSA Center for Commerce for ABI agents.

"I thought that the training was a success and received comments from those attending which were very positive," Giles said.

Sgt. Charles DeVinner of the Standards and Integrity Unit concurred. "The training was very beneficial and has given me more confidence while using the equipment," said DeVinner. "It also gave me a comprehensive look at the camera's limitations, features and overall abilities."

Bird Makes Joyful Noise for Great Cause

When he's not helping keep Public Safety's computer systems humming along, Systems Specialist Brad Bird makes a joyful noise of his own with his after-hours gig, Disowning Kaleb. Bird, the group's drummer, has performed with the Christian rock band since he helped form the group more than 11 years ago.

In addition to Bird, Disowning Kaleb counts among its members Josh Givens, who sings lead vocals and plays guitar; Patrick Franklin, who plays bass; and Kevin Boyer, who plays guitar.

Group members agree they enjoy their music because the melodies they create are limited only by their creativity and ability. "We write what we want to play. The music is solely ours," said Bird. Unlike a day job, where needs of a company or department dictate what actions are taken day to day, the band relies upon its creativity and makes the music its member choose to, said Bird.

Through their music, Bird and his band find opportunities for service. They recently participated in an annual event called "Diasozo," named for the Greek word which means to save thoroughly, make perfectly whole, cure, heal, preserve and rescue. The event, held at the Coosada Baptist Church for the past three years, is a fundraiser for Children's Hospital that features several Christian rock bands. This year's event attracted more than 300 teenage and young-adult enthusiasts and raised $5,000.

The band was compelled to sign up for this worthy cause after Franklin's nephew was diagnosed with a form of leukemia a few years ago. Bird said through divine intervention and the help of Children's Hospital, the nephew is in complete remission and doing well.

Formed while the group was in high school at Montgomery's Morningview Baptist Church, the band members continue to enjoy a lasting and harmonious friendship. Bird said although rock is the group's preferred music, he understands that not all believers enjoy or appreciate the genre as a platform for praise.

Will the group still be humming along in another 11 years? Bird said Disowning Kaleb is a group of best friends that has endured a lot, and the four are committed to making music for the rest of their lives. "Whether or not we're able to do it on any larger scale is up to God and our own personal drive," said Bird.

Ever hard at work in service through their music, Disowning Kaleb plans to release its new album, Hollowbody, later this year. Two music videos for two of the singles on the album have been created, and a third is in the works. In addition, the group has distributed its first single from the upcoming project to radio stations across the country on a compilation disc featuring other Christian rock groups such as Third Day and Mercy Me.

The Blue Light Retrospective...

We scanned DPS archives and blew the dust off an October 1996 issue of The Blue Light. Col. L.N. Hagan was the department's director.

"License Examiners Trained to Catch Fraud" was the headline, telling the tale of some 200 driver license personnel completing a required two-day class.

"Anyone on the front line who looks at these documents took the class," said DL Examiner Joan Cole.

According to the article, the training paid off, as examiners immediately were able to detect fraudulent documents. Upon observing suspicious documents, they were able to confer with Social Security to verify if a number was attached to a name, or Immigration and Naturalization to determine if the applicant was in the country legally.

TROOPERS DRIVE SAFETY

at 'Dega Fall Races

Troop C's Birmingham and Jacksonville posts teamed up on safety for the early October fall races at Talladega. Despite a controversial Cup finish on Sunday that angered fans, reports from the track indicate few — if any — problems. And although DPS personnel assigned to the 'Dega detail make it look easy, it takes plenty of planning and teamwork to keep this job on track.

"DPS efforts at the Talladega fall 2006 race were exemplary," said Capt. Robert Goodner, Troop C commander. "Troopers working intersection/traffic management displayed professionalism, commitment and extreme patience while working long hours."

Goodner applauded the work of the law enforcement team and said, "This was the smoothest race detail that I've experienced. The planning and inter-divisional cooperation, along with the quality of DPS personnel, were outstanding."

Public Safety employs a tried-and-true formula for ensuring safety and security at Talladega, revising plans each race as needed. During races, the "home-town" Jacksonville Post supervisors take a leadership role with regard to operations, not only to manage traffic flow entering and exiting race events, but also any actions required in the event of an emergency.

Highway Patrol personnel are assigned from all districts in the state. Operations are conducted 'round the clock, beginning on Thursday prior to the races and ending with release of the final traffic management teams on Monday following the Cup race. In conjunction with the Talladega Sheriff's Department and track security, DPS tactical units are on hand to assess critical incidents occurring on the track.

Troopers also conduct proactive traffic enforcement for the area. During last month's detail, troopers in three nights arrested 141 drivers under the influence; 20 special operations troopers conducted crowd control operations along Speedway Boulevard, eliminating the hazardous pedestrian encroachment onto the roadway; and ABI's EOD personnel provided investigative and preventive measures.

Trooper pilots canvassed the ground and the sky, providing vital aviation support and working in conjunction with Public Information/Education to provide traffic updates. Service Division personnel also deployed and maintained the new mobile command post and helped keep travel lanes open by using DPS tow trucks to move vehicles from roadways.

Enforcement efforts garnered many positive comments and earned the gratitude of NASCAR enthusiast Monica Lowell of Kansas City, Mo., who shared her thoughts in a recent e-mail to DPS. "The State Troopers kept us safe at the Talladega races," wrote Lowell. "You worked long hours and you were still friendly and courteous. I think you did a great job. Thanks again."

Trojan Airwaves'

Carolyn Hutcheson

Educates Alabamians about DPS
Mission, Service

*T*une in to WTSU radio at noon most Fridays and chances are you'll learn something new about the Department of Public Safety and its employees. That's because for more than two years, Carolyn Hutcheson has devoted much of her Community Focus series to educating Alabamians about the work of DPS.

Public Safety is fortunate and grateful to have partnered with "Trojan Country" radio and Hutcheson, who serves as host and producer of the series. The program, which airs daily at noon on Troy University Public Radio, spotlights topics of general interest to a broad audience and features information that may be useful in listeners' daily lives.

Hutcheson's passion for law enforcement and concern for the safety of her listening audience prompted her to spotlight topics germane to DPS on her Friday segments.

Through the series, Hutcheson affords DPS an opportunity to educate Alabamians about its work on their behalf. Topics have covered the gamut of the agency's mission, from traffic safety to sex offenders, and from drunken driving to identity theft. Her catalog of shows for DPS is extensive and clearly testifies to her work to expose listeners to a broad spectrum of Public Safety's mission.

"The Public Safety series has added a human face to the department," said Hutcheson. "I really enjoy asking DPS guests what assistance can my listeners provide to the troopers in ensuring safe highways," she said.

Hutcheson, a 23-year broadcast veteran, has hosted Community Focus for more than two years. She was encouraged to enter radio while working as a volunteer with the chamber of commerce in Selma. One of the chamber's board members was a local talk radio station's director. With persistent nudging from peers who admired her natural gift as a conversationalist, Hutcheson started a call-in talk radio show that lasted for about 13 years.

Through a friend, Hutcheson learned of an opening at WTSU and applied. You could say the rest is history, as Hutcheson has been with the public radio station for more than 10 years. Broadcasts air on the 100,000-watt WTSU 89.9 FM station. Troy University Public Radio also can be heard on WRWA 88.7 in the Wiregrass and WTJB in Phenix City.

Hutcheson credited loyal friends at DPS for their help with the program, including Col. Mike Coppage, Capt. Hugh McCall, Lt. Karl Wade, Sgt. Tim Sartain and Martha Earnhardt. She said DPS concurs with her that the series should continue as a staple of Troy University's Public Radio format.
